This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

This catalogue of members of the Yale Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa (1853–1898) is based on a list carefully prepared by the late Professor H. A. Newton, Graduate President of the Society.

The few important facts in the life of each member have been gathered from the class records deposited in the University library, to which Mr. Van Name has kindly given us access. The incompleteness of some of these records, both of entire classes and of individuals, has made adequate treatment of such cases impossible, but for all other shortcomings of the catalogue the Committee alone is responsible.

The last catalogue (1780–1852) contains the names of 1640 members: the present one 1300 members—a total of 2940 in the 118 years of the Chapter's existence; of this number about 1240 are now living.

The Committee have found the work extremely interesting and only regret that the short time allowed for its completion prevented them from re-editing the years 1780 to 1852 and incorporating these with the present issue. It is expected that the complete catalogue will be published in 1901, and in order that it may be as accurate as possible, it is urged that notification of errors in the present catalogue and notices of deaths, changes of residence, etc., be sent to the "Catalogue Committee," Phi Beta Kappa, Box 1496, New Haven, Conn.

We are deeply indebted to Mr. Franklin B. Dexter, Assistant Librarian of the University, for advice and assistance, and to Mr. George Dwight Kellogg, who has written the history of the local Chapter.

Phi Beta Kappa is now a firmly established institution at Yale. It has graduate and undergraduate officers, sends delegates to the meetings of the United Chapters, secures distinguished men to speak before the University, and holds bi-weekly meetings of the undergraduates during their Senior year. These have been held in the rooms of various members, with an attendance varying from 25 to 45 men. After the business of the evening is disposed of, a paper is read or talk given by one of the members, generally on some book, with readings, followed by a general discussion. Hereafter the Juniors who are admitted to membership at the annual banquet in the spring, will meet with the Seniors for the remainder of the college year.

The Chapter at Yale rests entirely on a scholarship basis, the only qualification of membership being the attainment of a certain rank in the appointments, announced by the Faculty at the beginning of Junior and end of Senior year. As was decided a year ago, beginning with the class of 1900 the appointment required will be that of Philosophical Oration. This will raise the standard of the Society and enhance the honor of membership. At the same time, the large number of students in each class, the steady improvement from year to year in preparatory and college work and the added attractions the Society now offers, insure a sufficient membership to make a strong, active organization.

While everything is being done to strengthen the undergraduate part of the Society and although it will continue to be the active, legislative body, it has seemed very desirable that the large number of graduate members should keep up their interest in the Society and have some influence in its doings. The catalogue is only the first of the steps taken to secure this result. A Graduate Committee has been appointed to raise money for and have control of a Graduate Fund. An amendment is now before the Society, with every probability of its being passed, requiring that this same committee shall be consulted with regard to any change in the constitution, and shall act as an advisory board generally.

This committee, furthermore, is to have control of the new quarters of the Society, assigned to it by the University, rent free, which are now being fitted up in White Hall. The room will be primarily for the meetings of the Society, but undergraduates will be supplied with keys and graduates may make use of its privileges at any time on application. The entire cost of fitting out the room is borne by a graduate member, who wishes his name withheld.

In 1901, during Yale's 200th anniversary celebration, a re-union of Phi Beta Kappa men will be held and everything will be done to make it an enthusiastic gathering. The question of a society house will come up at that time, and if it is answered in the affirmative—as there is every reason and need that it should be—it is expected that several large subscriptions will be immediately pledged. The year 1901 will be also the 125th anniversary of the founding of the society.

It is not only at Yale that the possibilities of Phi Beta Kappa are being realized. Among the 39 other Chapters there are fresh signs of activity, and 15 new colleges will apply for charters at the meeting of the United Chapters to be held at Saratoga, September 7, 1898.

A Phi Beta Kappa Alumni Association was formed a few years ago in New York City, and now has a membership of several hundred graduates of the various colleges. Its gatherings are said to be most successful in the character of the addresses delivered and in the subsequent discussion. This example might well be followed elsewhere.

In these ways is the Society realizing the ends set forth in its early charters; an "institution founded on literary principles," to promote "friendship and union" among its members.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF PHI BETA KAPPA

Over a quarter of a century has passed since Mr. Bagg pronounced what he doubtless intended for the funeral eulogy over the Yale chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.[1] As the commencements continued to come and go without the usual oration and poem, it became clear to all, that after nearly a hundred years of honored activity, the society had fallen asleep.

But there must have been cherished at Yale, as there had been in 1781, at the College of William and Mary, when dissolution threatened that patriotic institution, "a sure and certain hope, that the Fraternity would one day rise to Life everlasting and Glory immortal."[2] That the Yale chapter at present supplies a real need, is amply evidenced by the genuine and ever increasing interest displayed by the members since the revival of initiations fourteen years ago.

The story of the inception of the Virginia chapter has been often told. Dr. Edward Everett Hale's account in the Atlantic Monthly (July, 1879), entitled "A Fossil from the Tertiary," is a peculiarly genial and sympathetic treatment. The fullest history of the Yale society down to 1871 is in Mr. Bagg's "Four Years at Yale;" while in the sixth chapter of "Harvard College by an Oxonian" (1894), Mr. George Birbeck Hill presents an Englishman's impressions of what he naively terms our "aristocracy in a democratic country." The publication in the William and Mary College Quarterly Historical Magazine (April, 1896) of the early minutes of the parent society, together with many facts of biographical, historical and antiquarian interest, has at last made accessible abundant material for the examination of this subject. Lastly should be mentioned the publications of the secretary of the United Chapters, Rev. E. B. Parsons, D.D., of Williamstown, Mass., particularly that of 1897, which gives the officers, constitution and minutes of the United Chapters, and the present officers, customs and statistics of the forty separate branches.

[1] Bagg: "Four Years at Yale," pp. 224–235.

[2] Closing words of the original record of the William and Mary parent society, published in extenso in the William and Mary College Quarterly, April, 1896.

The society is probably indigenous to America. All attempts to connect its origin with the spread of the order of Illuminati in Bavaria, or to make it an importation by Thomas Jefferson, have proved futile. Jefferson was, it is true, in Williamsburg on the night of December 5, 1776, when the first meeting was held in the old Raleigh Tavern, with its mansard roof and rows of dormer-windows, in the room known as the Apollo Hall, which shortly before had echoed to the ringing words of Patrick Henry; but there is no evidence that Jefferson was in any way concerned with the organization of the society. Quite the contrary, for we may trust the Hon. William Short, president of the parent chapter from 1778 to 1781, when he writes in 1831: "The society was formed by a student who prided himself on being the best Hellenist there, to rivalize another society with Latin initials."

The introduction of Phi Beta Kappa into New England is one of the romantic incidents of American college history. In 1779 Mr. Elisha Parmele,[1] who had resided two years in New Haven as an undergraduate, and subsequently received his bachelor's degree from Harvard in 1778, was compelled to travel south for his health. Being an earnest scholar he was no doubt attached to the flourishing college at Williamsburg,

[1] Rev. Elisha Parmele (in the minutes of the society he is sometimes called Elijah) afterwards settled in Lee, Mass., July 3, 1783. In 1784 the church granted him leave of absence to regain his health; but he died suddenly, while traveling in Virginia, at the county-seat of Col. Abraham Byrd, Aug. 2, 1784, æt. 29. He has been characterized as "sound in the faith, amiable in disposition, distinguished for his talents, and acquirements, and eminent for his piety." (W. M. C. H. M., p. 251.)

Dr. E. E. Hale has in his possession a packet of papers and documents pertaining to Parmele, some being of especial interest, as they indicate in the young minister a high degree of scholastic attainment. Among them are to be found: a recommendation by Rev. Stephen West (Yale 1755), subscribed by Ezra Stiles, president of Yale College (1778–1795), certifying to the character of Rev. Elisha Parmele; his last will and testament, couched in very devout language; a manuscript Syriac grammar, bearing the date March 24, 1778, Cambridge; a Syriac translation of Paul's Address to the Athenians; and a Chaldee grammar; all these last mentioned works display remarkable care in execution.

No portrait of Parmele is known to exist. The pictures once belonging to the Byrds of Westover are now the property of the Harrisons of Brandon, but Mr. Charles Washington Coleman of Williamsburg, Va., who is well acquainted with the collection, informs me that he has not been able to discover in it any likeness of young Parmele.

where according to tradition[1] he attended the lectures of Prof. George Wythe, who held the first chair of law founded in an American college.[2] There appears to be no evidence that Parmele was a tutor at that institution.

We are made certain, however, by the society's minutes, that on July 3, 1779, Parmele was initiated into the Phi Beta Kappa. To judge by the attestations of love and affection which recur in the early cipher correspondence between Virginia and Connecticut, he was highly esteemed. When he started on his northward journey, he was entrusted with two "charter parties" drawn up on Dec. 4, 1779, and with power to establish two "scyons," in Cambridge and New Haven respectively; but inasmuch as he reached New Haven first, the Yale chapter, founded Nov. 13, 1780, antedates that at Harvard, which was organized Sept. 5, 1781.

Those early days were full of trial and uncertainty, but we may learn from their rhetoric that their hopes were none the less buoyant. A letter of 1782 to the Yale chapter says: "The present revolution in America is not inferior to the events which produced a Homer, a Vergil and a Milton. What state will have the honor of giving the world a poet, who shall do justice to the establishment of American Independence?" And again from the same year: "In the event of a return to peace, I trust to see the extended influence of the Φ. B. K. in its numerous branches at no distant period produce a union through the various climes and countries of this great continent of all lovers of literary merit, founded on the broad basis of personal emulation."

The Cambridge chapter when only a yearling writes through the secretary: "I conceive that the institution of the Φ. B. K. will have a happy tendency to destroy prejudices that too frequently subsist between different Universities, and make them act on a more liberal principle, and seek the mutual advantage of the several societies with which they may by their institution be connected."

Political questions formed the staple for discussion and debate. Many of the early members became suspiciously active in politics so that some good persons shook their heads, believing that the society had been intended as a political engine. Moreover, Jefferson's open fondness for William Short and others of the brethren may have helped give currency to the report that he had been the original promoter of the organization.

As a secret society "founded on literary and philosophical principles," the Yale chapter saw its palmiest days in the first half-century of its existence. Not more than a third of the Senior class could belong, the selection not being based wholly on scholarship as in later years. There were elaborate initiatory formulæ; members were brethren, and pledged to encourage friendship, morality and science. There was no fixed place of meeting, although there was at times a "usual place," which was often the "Rhetorical Chamber" or a tutor's room. In 1815, there were room-to-room meetings which have been so successfully revived since 1894. Public meetings were often held in the old Doolittle Hall, once on the corner of Elm and College Streets. The annual meetings being of especial importance and dignity, were assembled in the old Court House on the green, whence the society often adjourned to the Center Church if an oration was in the order of the day. At commencement there was a grand public gathering of the society at which the annual poem and oration were delivered.

We are all familiar with the solemnities of Phi Beta day at Harvard at the present day; a letter from the Harvard Chapter in 1780 shows that the exercises were no less impressive at that time: "We celebrated our anniversary with open doors. The students generally attended as well as some of the first characters of the State, who were on business in town. These circumstances seemed to give dignity to the Society, as the greatest regularity was observed by the members. The students paid us the highest respect standing in their places, until we walked out in order." Again in 1790, the Harvard chapter writes: "The Society proceeded to the Chapel, where two orations were delivered before a respectable and crowded audience, consisting of the governors of the university, and other gentlemen, and a number of ladies, and the students. . . . After two orations the Society retired to a house in town, where an elegant entertainment was provided. Having spent a couple of hours in convivial enjoyment and drank several toasts, expressive of our warm affection for the Society at large and our best wishes for its interest, and having smoked the calumet of peace and philanthropy, we took an affectionate parting."

In 1831 the Harvard chapter was forced by John Quincy Adams, John Hancock, Judge Story and others in authority to abandon the oath of secrecy.[1] Yale was soon prevailed upon to follow in the movement. Mr. Charles Tracy, of the Yale class of 1832, thus graphically describes the event:[2] "In those days freemasonry and anti-masonry fought their battles; and a grave question of conscience arose about the promise of secrecy exacted on initiation into the Phi Beta Kappa Society. Harvard was for resolving the secrecy and it sent Edward Everett to the private meeting at Yale to advocate the cause. He used a tender tone, stood half-drooping as he spoke, and touchingly set forth, that the students at Harvard had such conscientious scruples, as to keep them from taking the vow of secrecy, and the society life was thus endangered. There was stout opposition, but the motion prevailed, and the missionary returned to gladden the tender consciences of the Harvard boys. The secret of course was out. The world did not stare at the discovery; and when a few years had passed, the society took back its secrecy and revived its grip."

By the time of the Civil War, although the annual orations and poems were continued, the private meetings had wholly lapsed, so that when the annual public literary exercises ceased in 1871, the last thread of tradition seemed to be broken. But it was not so. After a short interim a revival of the institution was proposed by the class of 1884. Several graduate members on the faculty, the late Prof. Hubert A. Newton, '50, Mr. J. Sumner Smith, '53, and Prof. Tracy Peck, '61 empowered them to reorganize the society, and initiate the class of 1885, an event which was solemnized at a modest banquet in Alumni Hall. From this time on the society flourished directly in proportion as it recognized the social possibilities which might arise from the association of a score or more of young men united by the common bond of scholastic attainment and a vigorous purpose. On March 8, 1884, as the result of a conference with Prof. Newton and others, Mr. Ambrose Tighe, '79, a tutor in the college, suggested to the society the propriety of giving a regular course of public lectures. This idea was carried out by the class of 1885. The experiment has proved successful, so that the Phi Beta Kappa course has been officially recognized in the University Catalogue. The expense of these lectures is at present met by the undergraduate members. It is hoped that before long some generous alumnus may endow a lecture fund, providing also for the publication of particularly worthy addresses.

In 1895, when the constitution of the society was redrafted, a number of important additions were made. Stated literary meetings were appointed for the first Wednesday in each month; December 5, as the anniversary meeting, was to be appropriately observed with papers and addresses of historical interest; the annual meeting and the initiation-banquet were definitely placed; and the lecture-system formally adopted. Recently the class of 1898 decided to hold their literary meetings bi-weekly, from room to room.

The banquet has always been a prominent feature. In 1813 refreshments were voted too expensive and conducive to disorder, but the custom continued with succeeding classes, although upon one occasion the college authorities interposed to stop what then seemed reckless extravagance.

There are a few facts of antiquarian interest which should be referred to briefly. The "sign" was a left to right stroking of the chin. The "grip" was an ordinary clasping of the hands without locking of thumbs, but with a slight pressure on the wrist. The "knock" consisted of three raps, two soft and one loud, in anapaestic rhythm. The college bell used to announce the time of meeting, by a rough imitation of the old society cry, "Phi ai ai, Phi Beta Kappa." The favorite refreshment for informal occasions seems to have been the humble American peanut. In the early days of secret correspondence the cipher employed was the following: u, t, m, l, z, o, y, p, v, q, d, c, r, f, h, k, n, x, b, a, i, s, g, e. The same symbol was used for i and j, and v and w.[1]

[1] The cipher alphabet can easily be determined from a letter with its translation, both to be found in the society trunk of archives deposited in the University Library. Dr. E. E. Hale writes me under date of Nov. 22, 1895: "The Alphabet may be found in the Harvard Book, at page 344. Oddly enough, the authorities at Cambridge cannot find it in the very documents from which Mr. Dana copied the table."

The medal worn by members has varied in size at different times: at present a gold key of rather modest dimensions is preferred. Composition prizes were once awarded for the encouragement of literary activity. Proposals were once made to establish a fund for "indigent brethren," but without success. The records of the Yale chapter from 1781–1786 were lost. The three men who spirited them away in 1786 were subsequently tried and punished. Soon after the return of these priceless documents, they were again stolen, this time irrecoverably. The "trunk" deposited in the University Library contains the complete records from 1786–1846, the catalogue down to 1852, various publications of the society, manuscript essays, papers, etc., and a budget of letters from a number of distinguished men: Longfellow, Bryant, Holmes, Chancellor Kent, Calhoun, Daniel Webster, Edward Everett and Rufus Choate. The following letter from Oliver Wendell Holmes, in which he declines an honor which he was able to accept several years later, is now printed for the first time:

BOSTON, Sept. 7, 1847.

Dear Sir:

I have deferred answering your letter containing the invitation of the Φ. B. K. Society of Yale College to deliver a poem before them for the reason that I was unwilling to decline, and yet knew not how to accept.

As it is necessary, however, to decide the question without further delay, I feel myself compelled to give up the pleasure I should have had in appearing before the society of our sister college, in the view of many previous engagements of different but engrossing nature, which occupy me during many coming months. I need only say, that I could hardly make up my mind to forego this opportunity so kindly offered me, to convince you that I think my excuse is a good one.

I have never visited Yale College, where my father was educated and everything connected with which he always regarded with the deepest interest. With a hereditary right to love and venerate this noble institution, I am the one who most regrets that this kind invitation found me involved in so many engagements that it would have been unfair to have submitted myself to the judgment of such an audience as I should have had, with such preparation only as I should have found leisure to make in the midst of various distractions.

I am, with much respect,

Your obedient Servant,

O. W. HOLMES.

To Rev. E. Strong, New Haven, Conn.

It is a curious bit of literary history not generally known, that the Phi Beta Kappa poem read by Dr. Holmes in New Haven, on Aug. 14, 1850, does not appear in his collected works under its title, "Astræa: The Balance of Illusions." In the Riverside edition, it appears among "Songs in Many Keys," broken up into several distinct poems: Spring; The Study; The Bells; Non-Resistance; The Moral Bully; The Mind's Diet; Our Limitations. The original, consisting of 39 pages, was published in 1850, by Ticknor, Reed and Fields.

For many reasons it seems a pity that the characteristic oration and poem should have been abandoned at Yale. The Harvard series contains works of the best American orators and poets, preëminently Emerson's "American Scholar" in 1837. A complete description with bibliography by Mr. William H. Tillinghast has been prepared for the Harvard Library Bulletins, 1891.

In closing let me add just a word touching the present relations of the several chapters. The clumsiness of handling society business by correspondence led in 1881 to the organization of the United Chapters, with the proper constitution and officers. A National Council consisting of the senators, and not more than three delegates from each chapter, is held triennially. The council has no power to restrict or abridge the rights or privileges now exercised by existing chapters, except as expressly provided in the constitution of that body.

The conditions in New Haven at the present day are peculiarly favorable for developing social and literary activity among the members. The centralized life of the first two years and the grouping of the best scholars into separate divisions assuring acquaintanceship; the sympathy that must arise from common ideals of scholastic attainment and seriousness of purpose; the inspiring associations that cluster about the society; these are but a few of the forces which make towards this end. The Alumni share this feeling; the Faculty have always been glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of coming into closer touch with the best scholars in each class; the undergraduate members invariably express themselves surprised to discover the depth of thought, intensity of feeling and nobleness of character that are often possessed by some of their more quiet and obscure classmates.
